In the Matter of the Estate of John A Dix deceased

George W. Shirley one of the Administrators of said estate on his oath says that the claims notes and accounts a list of which is hereto attached which were inventoried as part of the assets of said estate and charged at their full face value and appraised at their maximum value, said Administrator says that said notes and accounts were at the time they were so appraised and charged upon and inventory were uncollectible and still remained that he has made diligent effort to collect said debts without resorting legal proceedings to ^{thereof} collect ^{and has wholly failed to collect the whole or any part} in which case the estate would have been compelled to pay the cost the parties against whom said claims existed being the owners of less property than the law would exempt from execution.
Said Administrator says that in his judgment the further attempt to collect said debts would result in expense and injury to said estate and he files here with the notes and a list of the accounts corresponding in number with the number on the inventory and asks that they may be allowed credit on their account with said estate for the amount at which said claims were charged upon said inventory. Geo W. Shirley Adm
